

Keith Perry was born on December 12, 1958 in Tallahassee, FL to Nathan W. Perry, Ph.D. and Doris Perry. After graduating high school in 1976, Perry started as an employee for a small residential roofer. Several months later he branched out on his own to found his own company and Perry Roofing was born. Things grew faster than he could have imagined, and the young Keith Perry selected a path of business ownership, community involvement and success.

In 1989, Keith served as the President of the North Central Florida Roofing and Sheet Metal Association. The company is a member of the National Roofing Association and boasts such awards as the Business Leader of the Year 2006 – Gainesville Chamber of Commerce and Expansion Business of the Year 2006 – Gainesville Chamber of Commerce. Most recently taking home the Alachua Chamber of Commerce Business of the Year for Commitment to the Environment—2009.

Today, Perry Roofing is one of RSI's Top 100 Roofers and has grown to over 200 employees with four offices throughout the state of Florida. Perry has covered private homes to monolithic buildings such as the Randall Malcolm VA Center, Wal-Mart, UF's Library West and NASA's Operation's Support Building.

Keith Perry's involvement extends from his family and business into his community. He has served as the President of House of Hope, a Christian-based rehabilitation program for newly-released prisoners, since its inception in 1996. He is also an active supporter of the Habitat for Humanity where he donates the labor for their new homes. Other interests include the Boy's and Girl's Club, the Dignity Project and the Reichert House.

Keith and his wife Amy married 15 years ago in March of 1994 and have two children.
